Cigarette Smoking: How Much Worse Can It Get?

To the Editor:

I was delighted to read Dr Califf’s recent editorial. What made it so special wasn’t just the scientific part of the editorial, but Dr Califf’s discussion of the equally important (if not most important) ingredient that transforms an ordinary, or even an extraordinary, individual with an MD degree into a physician, and this is the humanity and ethics of medicine.

Dr Califf is absolutely correct when he points out the inhumane attitude of some MDs toward the ordinary human frailties of many of our patients. This is a new phenomenon, where doctors blame the patients for their ills and seriously consider not treating them. The patients who suffer the most from this attitude are the socioeconomically deprived members of our society (the elderly, minorities, and the poor). Having a patient choose between spending limited funds at a fast food place for high-calorie sustaining meals for themselves or their children or paying for expensive medication is a no-contest choice. For someone to call such patients noncompliant and berate them is an inhumane act. Such an act is grossly immoral and cruel by any healthcare provider, especially one with an MD degree.

David S. David, MD, FACP
2222 Santa Monica Boulevard, Suite 302
Santa Monica, CA 90404

Cigarette Smoking: How Much Worse Can It Get?
David S. David

Circulation. 2001;103:e128
doi: 10.1161/01.CIR.103.25.e128
Circulation is published by the American Heart Association, 7272 Greenville Avenue, Dallas, TX 75231
Copyright © 2001 American Heart Association, Inc. All rights reserved.
Print ISSN: 0009-7322. Online ISSN: 1524-4539

The online version of this article, along with updated information and services, is located on the World Wide Web at:
http://circ.ahajournals.org/content/103/25/e128

Permissions: Requests for permissions to reproduce figures, tables, or portions of articles originally published in Circulation can be obtained via RightsLink, a service of the Copyright Clearance Center, not the Editorial Office. Once the online version of the published article for which permission is being requested is located, click Request Permissions in the middle column of the Web page under Services. Further information about this process is available in the Permissions and Rights Question and Answer document.

Reprints: Information about reprints can be found online at:
http://www.lww.com/reprints

Subscriptions: Information about subscribing to Circulation is online at:
http://circ.ahajournals.org/subscriptions/